

Barbara Rosenblum Bissierier: Two words: exciting and adventurous. After the single life and traveling the world and around the United States by car for six months, taking a few months to live in Mexico with a family of 9 kids, I settled in San Francisco. Also worked for Arthur Frommer for quite a few years and updated his travel books; again passion for travel and languages. Had many interesting hats; last one was 22 years in marketing and advertising. Married to a Frenchman 31 years, traveled often to France and speak the language. Have jumped out of planes, swam with sharks, parasailed, and otherwise tested myself to try new things. Recently lost my partner of 6-1/2 years to cancer; am a cancer survivor as well. Cancer made me a better and more compassionate person. I am grateful for every day; also a big animal advocate working with our local humane society.

Fortunate to have friends in many parts of the world. Sorry to hear how many good people are gone. Try to pay it forward as a cancer mentor, foster abused pets, and carry Starbucks gift certificates which I hand out to our fellows in blue or service members as a small thank you for their service. Life is great and adore where I live in Solana Beach, north of San Diego. Have 2 kids and 4 beautiful grandchildren. They are magical! Wishing for all of you good health and happiness and a life where you all spread some goodness. Being a grandparent is the best!

A recent photo (below) of my newest grandchild and my pup. Doing well and enjoying life in Solana Beach, California. Sorry for all the good people we have lost. I feel grateful every day to be healthy and happy in my corner of the universe.
